THE RIVEN HOUND

LEGIONES ASTARTES • WORLD EATERS OR BLACKSHIELDS

Before the Nails' final rite was ever forced on his Legion, Haar was already the finest hunter the World Eaters had — the kind of officer everyone hoped would never have a reason to turn that skill on his own brothers.

This model can be fielded with either the World Eaters Faction Keyword (before the Legion's fall — a still-loyal Legion officer) or the Blackshields Faction Keyword (after it — the Riven Hound, exiled and hunted by his own former Legion). Same stats and points either way; see The Hound's Vendetta below for the one rule that changes.

The Riven Hound
Once per turn, when this model is selected to fight, you can choose for it to make only 1 attack with the Terrawatt-Pattern Power Gauntlet instead of its normal number of attacks. If you do, add 4 to that attack's Strength characteristic and 2 to its Damage characteristic.

Predator's Focus
Each time this model makes an attack that targets a Character model, you can re-roll the Hit roll and the Wound roll.

The Hound's Vendetta
If this model has the Blackshields Faction Keyword, each time it makes an attack that targets a unit with the World Eaters keyword, you can re-roll the Hit roll and the Wound roll (this replaces Predator's Focus against World Eaters targets, rather than stacking with it).

The Nails Refused
This model automatically passes Battle-shock tests, and cannot be affected by any rule that would force it to declare a charge or prevent it from declaring a Fall Back move.

Warlord
If this model is your Warlord, once per battle, in your Command phase, you can gain 1 Command Point.

> Designer's Note. Built from the real HH3e digitized "Endryd Haar" profile once found — he lives in `Blackshields.json`, a whole faction file (Legion-deserters and renegades with no Legion allegiance) our local > BSData snapshot was entirely missing until it was refreshed. That real profile is inherently his post-defection form (Blackshields, by definition, means he's already left the Legion) — there's no digitized "still a loyal World Eater" version of him anywhere. Per the user's call: rather than needing a second, undocumented homebrew card for his pre-Heresy state, this single datasheet now supports both by making the one Legion-specific rule optional. Real stat line: M7/WS6/BS5/S4/T5/W4/I5/A5/LD10/SAV2+/INV4+, 165pts (HH3e economy) — notably tougher (T5) than Khârn's real T4 despite both being Captain-adjacent in scale, translated here as T5 in 11e (one step above the Praetor/Khârn T4 baseline). Real weapons: Archeotech Pistol (R12/FP1/RS6/AP4/D2, Pistol + Breaching(3+) + Assault) and Terrawatt-Pattern Power Gauntlet (SM+4/AP2/D3, Power) — both translated directly. The Riven Hound Gambit is real, pulled straight from the source. The real profile's Hatred (World Eaters) rule only makes sense once he's already an outcast hunting his former Legion, so it's now split: Predator's Focus (re-roll vs. Characters) is the generic, always-on version that works whether he's still nominally part of the Legion or not; The Hound's Vendetta is the original Hatred (World Eaters) rule, gated to only apply once the model is fielded with the Blackshields Faction Keyword. Not from the real data: Stealth, Lone Operative, and The Nails Refused are this project's own additions — kept because they fit the established "Garro pattern" for loyalist-holdout characters (see [[project_hh_legion_rules]]) and don't contradict anything in the real profile. The real "Fangs of the Emperor" rule (grants Infiltrate to non-Bulky Blackshields Infantry when Haar is the army's sole High Command choice) is a Blackshields detachment-level effect, out of scope for a single-model card. 11e codex update (18 Oct 2026): power armour T5 like the codex Intercessors and the Chaos Legionaries; Astartes bolt weapons S5 AP-1 (pistols [CLOSE-QUARTERS]) and codex-named weapons on the codex profile; points scaled with Captain 80→90.
