MORTUS POISONER SQUAD

CHEMICAL WARFARE SPECIALISTS

LEGIONES ASTARTES • DEATH GUARD • TRAITOR

Long before Nurgle ever whispered to this Legion, the Death Guard were already the Imperium's foremost chemists of the battlefield. The Mortus Poisoners were simply ahead of what the rest of the Legion would eventually become.

Designer's Note. Built from the real HH3e digitized "Mortus Poisoner Squad" profile (`Death Guard.json`) — a genuinely striking piece of pre-Heresy lore: the Death Guard were chemical-warfare specialists long before Nurgle ever touched them, and this unit's real weapon options (poison flamers, toxin loads) show that clearly. Real stat line: M7/WS4/BS4/S4/T4/W1/I4/A2/LD7 (Poison-master LD8), SAV3+, no invulnerable save — a light Battleline squad, not Terminator-tier, translated to 11e as M7"/T4/Sv3+/W1/LD8+/OC1 (single Wound preserved directly rather than rounded up, matching how thin this unit really is in the source data). Priced at 70/140 for 5/10, scaled from the real 22pts unit base + 12pts/model economy. The Alchem Flamer (real Poisoned(2+)) and Power Scythe (same real profile used across Calas Typhon, the Deathshroud, and the Grave Wardens) are both real. Bitter Duty is a real named rule — in the source text it's a strict mutual-exclusivity join restriction ("can only join/be joined by other Bitter Duty models"), translated here as no Leader attachment either way, matching the no-Leader precedent already used for similarly-isolated units like the World Eaters' Red Butchers. 11e codex update (18 Oct 2026): power armour T5 like the codex Intercessors and the Chaos Legionaries; Astartes bolt weapons S5 AP-1 (pistols > [CLOSE-QUARTERS]) and codex-named weapons on the codex profile; points scaled with Intercessor Squad 80→85.
