Designer's Note. This card represents the original 1987 Rogue Trader metal Space Marine Dreadnought miniature specifically — a walker chassis that could mount four heavy weapons in independently-targeted arm hardpoints, distinct from the modern Forge World resin Contemptor kit. That multi-weapon configurability survived only sporadically through later editions before modern Dreadnoughts settled into the 1-2 main weapon pattern. "Chuck" reimagines that 1st Ed multi-arm Dreadnought: four synchronised bolt-guns paired in the upper limbs, paired Gravis power fists in the lower limbs, and a "Power Field Synchroniser" (the standard atomantic shielding re-fluffed to tie the bolters' volley together). 11th-edition verification, 2026-08-31: a real "Relic Contemptor Dreadnought [Legends]" now exists in current BSData (M6"/T9/Sv2+/W10/LD6+/OC3, 5+ inv) — for the modern Forge World resin kit, a different physical model from the 1987 metal miniature this card represents, with a genuinely distinct weapon loadout, so it remains homebrew rather than being retired. However, used the real chassis as a calibration reference for the "rules jump": tightened T10→T9 and OC4→OC3 to match the canonical Contemptor baseline (no fluff reason for this variant to be tankier or better at holding objectives than the modern chassis). Kept M12"/Fly as-is — fluff-justified by Chuck's unique jump-pack "Close Assault" identity, distinguishing him from a standard stomping Contemptor.
